

Farm Show Commission approves 4-H, FFA improvements

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania State Farm Products Show Commission has approved plans for improvements to benefit 4-H, FFA and Future Homemakers of America facilities at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

The Commission, at its March meeting, voted to spend $10,000 to improve housing for youth participating in activities at the complex. According to state agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, housing improvements had been considered the top priority by a Committee on Youth Activities, which was asked at the January Commission meeting to make recommendations for overall improvements in youth programs.

The Commission determined to buy or receive donations for housing improvements including ten double bunkbeds and 50 cots, replacement of mattresses, refurbishing of dormitory space, expansion of shower facilities, lighting, heating and paint.

Hallowell said, "We made a commitment to our farm youth programs last fall, and have been considering improvements for several years. This action by the Commission marks the first step toward insuring the future of these important activities for farm youth in the complex.

A second priority recommendation by the committee, increased premiums for market swine and market lambs, and a one way transportation allowance for entries in junior livestock events at the Farm Show, was referred to the Premium List Committee for further study at this time.

The Committee on Youth Activities was chaired by Thomas

King, associate director of Extension services for the state. Maurice S. Kramer, state 4-H program director and Charles Lego, state advisor for FFA programs, also serve on the Committee.

The Farm Show Commission also voted to stage a second concert for the 1983 Farm Show, with proceeds again going to Farm Youth Activities. The 1982 concert which featured Tammy Wynette was successful.

Stitch in time

the other two sides of the block until the first row is completed around the center square (figure 2).

Select a new strip and repeat the process to create a second row of fabric around the center block. Continue sewing strips around the square until all the batting has been covered. As you near the outer edges of the batting, you will no longer be working around a block, but will be sewing individual strips in each corner. Be sure to maintain the same color sequence.

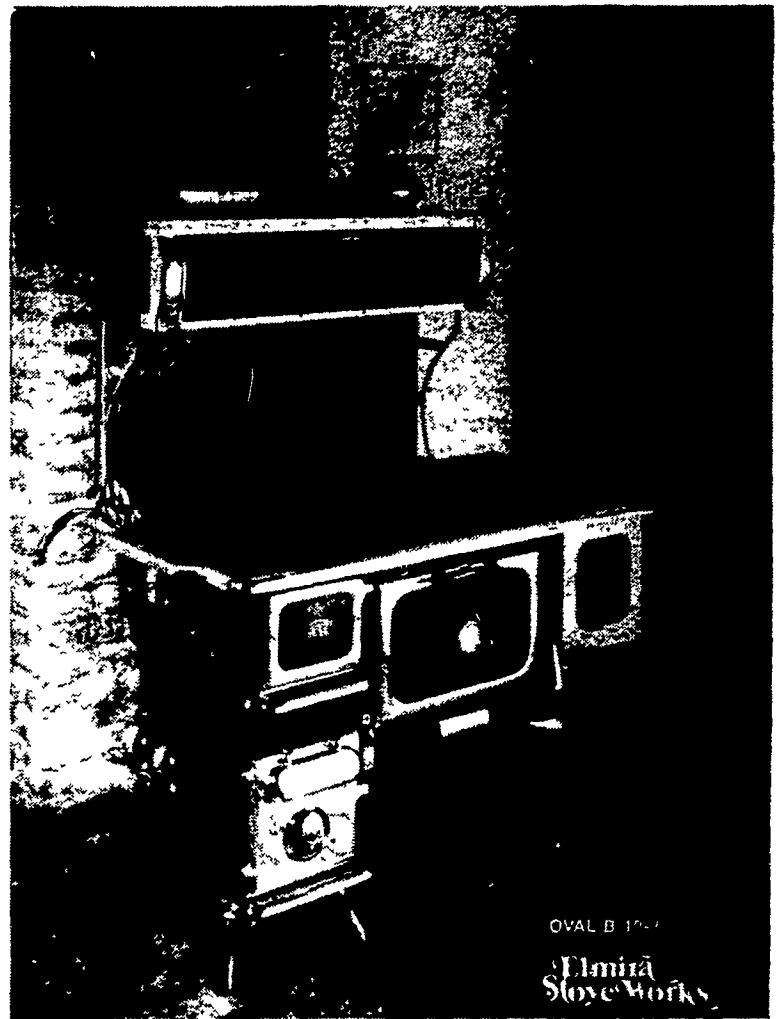

When the batting is completely covered with fabric, steam press with a damp cloth. Clip away original size of the block. Batting may have stretched.

To finish the pillow, you can sew lace, embroidered eyelet, ruffle or a combination of these around the edge. Place the backing for the pillow face down to pillow top, stitch down, leaving an opening to turn right side out. Stuff and slip stitch the opening.

Lynn suggests counted cross stitch work in the pillow center or embroidery for variety. She also said fabrics other than the typical cotton calicos can be used. Use corduroy, velvet, suede, and heavier cottons as well. Experiment for the finished product you have in mind.
