MAY-CO SILO LINERS

The term "Dry Matter" is possibly the most misunderstood term used in the cattle feeding business, and many people interpret the term to mean many things. "Dry Matter" is the solids portion of a feed. It is not a measure of the VALUE of a feed. Cattle produce not on the dry matter, but on the nutrients they consume. It is therefore important to know how much dry matter a cow is eating, but it is more important to know how much digestible nutrients is in the dry matter. The term most often used to tell us this is Total Digestible Nutrients, or T D N, for short. We know we can get more dry matter per acre by letting crops get older, but at early bloom for alfalfa, and early dent for corn silage the dry matter yield is a bit lower, but it has a higher T D N yield. The fiber, cellulose, leaves, cob, stalks and the whole plant is easier digested when it is green, succulent and full of juice, making more T D N. We must measure our crops by the T D N per acre and not by bushel, bales, or tons. The next step is to retain more of the nutrients we cut in the field by making a rapid, oxygen free ferment. This can be done by installing a MAY-CO PLASTIC LINER inside your silo. This liner will eliminate juice run off, air leaking at the doors, and the flow of oxygen circulating through the silage. By eliminating this oxygen flow more lactic acid is created making a much better ferment. In an oxygen free ferment the silage will not freeze, will not shrink, will not spoil or heat between feedings in hot weather and will produce more T D N and Digestible Protein without an additive.
