"Ginny Gem" captures grand champion

UNIONTOWN — "Allen-Hill King Ginny Gem" sired by Cotterdale Astronaut King, captured the senior and grand champion ribbons at the 13th annual Fayette County Black and White Show, held Aug. 3 at the county fairgrounds.

The 5-year-old champion was just one of several top placing animals exhibited by Allen-Hill Dairy, R1 Smock, named the show's premier breeder and exhibitor.

Their 3-year-old entry, by Kanaz Brook Matt Carlo, "Allen-Hill Carol Jewel Gem," won the reserve senior and grand honors for the Smock dairy operation. Among their other blue-ribbon wins were the dairy herd, best three females and dam and daughter categories.

Junior champion rosettes went to Terry Kuehn of Monroeville, for his senior yearling "Vonderbar Pete Ruby, by Straight-Pine Elevation Pete. Taking the reserve champion heifer spot was Raymond Brown of Acme, with a senior calf sired by Circle-B Bootmaker Marty.

Approximately 120 Holsteins

circled the ring for the annual show, judged by Harry Roth, Atlantic Breeders Cooperative.

Packing plant encourages more local beef

DOWNINGTOWN — More than 350 cattle producers and their families from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland met recently during the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Field Day at the Devereux-Soleil Farm, near Downingtown, Chester County. Stewart "Turk" Laidlow of the Consumer Affairs and Quality Assurance Division, Moyer Packing Company, Souderton, was guest speaker. Laidlow commended the cattlemen on the quality cattle they produce. "However, we could use more cattle than are currently produced in Pennsylvania," he said. "Moyer Packing kills more than 1,000 head of cattle per day, and we like to use your local cattle." Laidlow encouraged producers to market their livestock throughout the year, rather than summer and fall. "Producers can benefit by marketing year-round because they increase their chances of receiving higher prices," Laidlow said.
