Grange leadership school focuses on 'growing better'

HUNTINGDON — To the more than 250 Grange members attending State Grange Leadership School at Juniata College last weekend, like agriculture in Pennsylvania, the Grange is "growing better."

The State Grange adopted the Department of Agriculture's theme for this year's conference, which focuses on leadership training for Grange officers and members.

"The Grange is growing better in Pennsylvania," State Master Charles Wismer told members in an opening speech. "We're growing better in membership, in legislative success, and in services for our members."

Throughout the weekend, Grange members participated in workshops on such subjects as motivation, working with committees, public speaking and developing strong Grange policy. Some of these workshops were led by outside speakers from Juniata College and Penn State University.

Guest speakers from the Leadership Banquet held Saturday evening was Fran Fisher, assistant athletic director at Penn State University. Known as the "voice of Penn State football" for his colorful radio football coverage, Fisher talked on the "total program" at the University.

"Success in each program at Penn State, such as sports, music and also agriculture, reflect positively on the University as a whole," he said.

At the banquet, a first place trophy in the State Grange youth volleyball championship was presented to a team from Washington County. Statewide eliminations had been held during the leadership seminar.

During the conference, Wismer announced that the State Grange will focus on local leadership training in the next Grange year.

"The State Grange will work with officers in local Granges to develop strong leadership in rural Pennsylvania," he said.
