Britain visits America

added, "We couldn't have crammed anymore into our time here."

Joyce Marment traveled from Bristol without her husband who doesn't like to fly, and she visited in the Maytown home of Mr. and Mrs. William Endslow. A former social worker, Mrs. Marment said she was enjoying the wide open space, adding, "I could quite easily have become a farmer's wife."

A special thrill for her was the opportunity to survey the area from the vantage point of a light plane, and attend a wedding.

She said, "We have found that we are very alike. There are different expressions and we serve our food differently. I've put on a bit of weight," she said with a laugh.

"I think Friendship Force is aptly named. We see that America is not all like Kojak and Marilyn Monroe. There are more good people than bad ones. People here are very friendly - more than I ever expected."

Another point she made, echoed by several others, "I like your attitude about religion. Our churches are very empty."

Our own visitors were Alain and Anita Kehoe, also from Bristol. Alain is an art student and his wife is a homemaker and mother to their two children, Michele and Adrienne. She also breeds birds in their home.

Anita said, "I was excited about the trip, but I didn't quite know what to expect. I was pleased with the reception. We felt very welcome." She said they were attracted to this program because, "The fact of being with a family made you feel welcome. I'd rather be with a family than on my own. Alain wanted to come initially, but I'd never traveled very much so I was a bit wary."

For Alain, the trip was something he'd always wanted. "I have always wanted to come to America because it is so big and there is so much to see. America is very important to the world. We also feel a certain affiliation because you speak English."

Having met Americans in England, Alain said he felt the same towards them as he does toward the ones he met in this country. "I like them. They are like I expected."

As a homemaker, Anita remarked, "The food here is more imaginative and has more flavor, with more mixture of taste. It is nicely presented and it is very colorful."

Visits to local craft shops were a pleasure, and Anita said, "The crafts have given me a lot of inspiration and ideas to take back. The craft ideas are very simple, very effective. They are pleasurable to look at and they show a lot of patience, that people sit and do these things."

A trip to Washington, Philadelphia and New York made their impressions on the Kehoes. Anita said, "The size of the buildings in the cities amazed me. Also the amount of space individual places have. In England, even the detached houses are very close together."

Alain agreed that New York was "most impressive." The buildings and avenues were "very different" from London where Alain grew up. "There is so much crammed into such a small space. There is so little room, especially on Manhattan Island." He called the Empire State Building "quite amazing."

"There is so much to see in Washington, D.C. It is very clean and well laid out. It is almost like a show place - a city of monuments."

After an ice cream party which included 12 children with the adults guests, Anita said, "I am very impressed with the children here. They are very well behaved and there seems to be discipline without shouting. I find children respond quicker to being told, and there is a more relaxed atmosphere."

Coming from the city to a semi-rural home, Anita remarked, "The night sounds really did surprise me. Even in the country in England it is not the same. We might hear some crickets, but not the other sounds."

Anita added, "I have enjoyed everything. It has been very exciting. The people are very, very friendly and not so shy as British people. British people tend to be more reserved."

Though they claim to be reserved in England, the visitors who came to this country could not have been friendlier, as all the hosts agree.
