PennAg holds feed workshop

HARRISBURG — A Medicated Feed Workshop was held at the Sheraton-West on Wednesday by the PennAg Industries Association.

The primary purpose of the workshop, attended by some 30 representatives of manufacturers of medicated feed, was to outline legal responsibilities associated with that manufacture.

John Longenecker, chief of Pennsylvania's Commercial Feed Bureau, commented on his department's involvement with Federal Drug Administration inspections in the Commonwealth.

Dr. Emmett Robertson, a nutritional consultant from Millersville, spoke on the record-keeping requirements that must be followed by the medicated feed manufacturer.

Dr. Howard Frederick, Director of Nutrition, American Feed Manufacturers Association, of Arlington, Va., presented an in-depth program on the manufacture of medicated feeds.

Dr. Frederick is the author of "Recommended Guidelines for Mills Subject to FDA Inspection." Copies are available on request from PennAg Offices, Ephrata.

Medicated feeds have been a tremendous asset to American agriculture, Sam Sherk, PennAg's director of services, commented today.

Through the use of these products, the nation's farmers have been able to produce larger quantities of high quality food in a shorter period of time, he pointed out. This helps in the effort to provide quality food products at reasonable prices, he added.

The Medicated Feed Workshop is one of a number of educational-informational sessions that are held by PennAg concerning topics of interest and importance, not only to its membership, but agriculture in general.
