

She can't stop promoting milk, even on her wedding day!

This year, more than ever before in the dairy industry, promotion is the name of the game, and hopefully, the answer to the milk surplus problem. But while some people choose to promote milk through use of bumper stickers, painted signs and free milk, some try to find the most ingenious ways to promote the delicious, refreshing product. One such 'die-hard' dairy promoter, is former state dairy princess Charlene Rohrer - now Mrs. Merle Ranck - who included milk punch served from ADA's punch dispenser at her wedding reception. Shown above are Merle and Charlene Ranck, and guests Susan Beshore from ADA and Doug Hershey. Mrs. Elvin Rohrer, Charlene's mother, shared the picture with us and wrote, "pitchers of milk and huge bowls of ice cream were served with the ham dinner." Congratulations Merle and Charlene, that's promotion at its finest!

Burley period extended

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has extended by 30 days — until June 22 — the comment period on its proposal regarding the sale or forfeiture of allotments and quotas for burley and flue-cured tobaccos. The deadline for submitting comments originally was May 23. Under the proposal, entities, but not individuals, not significantly involved in management or use of land for agricultural purposes would be required to sell or forfeit burley and flue-cured allotments or quotas. According to Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the proposed change would apply to allotments or quotas on land owned by governmental entities, public utilities, educational and religious institutions, among others. Rank said USDA extended the comment period in response to numerous requests for such action and because of the "wide range of the proposal's effects and the great interest shown so far."

THE MOST UNIQUE - PROFITABLE DAIRY COMPUTER SYSTEM

With Dairy-Matic 2 Ration Feeders

Data-Feed

Guaranteed to handle corn silage, total mixed ration w/limited haylage, high moisture shelled and ground ear corn with husk, concentrates and premixes. Dairy supply tank with automatic bottom unloader. Continuous flow mixer automatically meters and mixes any amount of ingredients as needed.

DATA-FEED utilizes the easy-to-operate Rockwell AIM 65 computer, built to last by the space shuttle people. It feeds one ration, or any combination of two rations, all at the same feeder. Instant printouts track feeding activity of individual cows and the entire herd. An alarm list identifies non-eaters and partial eaters. Herd management is made easy with DATA-FEED's new cow calendar print-out.

Stainless Steel Dairy-Matic Feeders built especially for high moisture corn.

Users report up to $20/cow per month increased cash flow with computer system by maximizing production & minimizing feed costs. Equipment costs from $79.00 per cow, or montly lease plan payments from $1.75 per cow.
