"Milk in the stores is not up to state standards," he states. He advocates higher testing cows for butterfat and protein. "The higher the protein in the milk, the more cheese it will make," Dreisbach explains, and adds that a centrifuge is currently being developed by scientists to take the water out of the milk on the farm. This way the dairymen would just be shipping the solids. "This is really the future in dairying," he oncludes

On these lines, Dreisbach is also those dairymen producing high solids milk. Those that would benefit the most would be the dairies with a manufacturing plant since more cheese, butter, ice cream, etc., could be made with a lot less milk, if it were higher solids milk.

"It's the only way you can really sell milk with end product pricing, that's fair to the farmer, Dreisbach states.

To further his case for end produce pricing, Dreisbach will sit down with any dairymen and present the facts on paper of existing dairies and dairymen already receiving the benefits from this type of program. He has spoken at many meetings on this
