

Baked Potatoes

potatoes taste so much better than potatoes eaten anywhere else?

Percy Troutman explained that he and his wife use bigger ovens to cook the potatoes at the Farm

Show. He also said the potatoes are baked for a longer period of time and at a lower temperature than those at home.

"They do taste a lot different than those made at home," Percy agreed.

He explained that there are 35 people who work at the stand, making doughnuts, frying potatoes, baking them and putting butter on the hot potatoes. Approximately 30 tons of potatoes are used at the stand during the Farm Show, and Mrs. Troutman said they often sell between 4,000 and 5,000 doughnuts each day of the Farm Show.

Here, two of the women working at the potato stand at the Farm Show prepare the batter for the potato doughnuts. Mrs. Troutman, co-owner of the cooking equipment at the stand, said they sell between 4,000 and 5,000 doughnuts each day.

There are 35 employees working at the baked potato stand at the Farm Show. Some bake potatoes, some fry them, some make doughnut batter and some put butter on the fresh-from-the-oven treats.
