Uniontown Farm Equipment Co.,
the dealership
with "pull"

Potential tractor customers be forewarned: Shop at Rich Lustik's Uniontown dealership, and you just might go home with 2,000 horsepower in harness.

Soon after opening its doors in 1976, Uniontown Farm Equipment began modifying Allis-Chalmers tractors for tractor-pulling competition. The firm sponsors its own tractor, attending pulls throughout the country, and one of Uniontown's "Hyper + Plus" designs has been the state winner in its class for four of the past seven years. Competition pullers from as far away as Kansas are competing with Uniontown-modified A-C tractors.

But Uniontown's expertise is not limited to agricultural hotrods. In 1981 a new shop was constructed, adding 7,000 square feet of floor space to accommodate the growing demand for service. The company is currently constructing a second location in the Washington County town of Eighty-Four, scheduled for completion during the fall of... (when else?) 1984.

A few key staff members include parts manager Tom Mutnansky, service manager Jeff Lohr, and salesmen Sonny Helen and Andy Falat, with the firm's owner, Rich Lustik acting as sales manager.

Not limited to the sale of full-size tractors, Uniontown Farm Equipment received the 1979 Circle of Honor Award for lawn and garden products.
