You've no doubt worked out your own recipe for putting up good haylage. But can you cut the loss of dry matter and preserve the nutrients you put into your silo? You sure can. If you use Vigorsile™.

You can chop your hay earlier with less leaf loss, because Vigorsile works its best between 50% and 70% moisture. Vigorsile aids in providing the right amount of fermentation needed to preserve haylage. The result is less heat, yeast and mold. That means higher feed quality and better palatability. Feed consumption goes up and so does production.

Vigorsile haylage inoculant is a lactobacillus plantarum bacteria. And it's guaranteed strong. Guaranteed to give you more than 100 million working bacteria per gram.

So, ask your Vigortone dealer if you can preserve higher quality haylage, he'll say — yes you can.
