

Farmers and ranchers are eligible for conservation awards

WASHINGTON — Farmers and ranchers demonstrating practical ways to conserve soil and water in their operations are eligible to participate in a national soil and water conservation awards program.

This marks the second annual program, sponsored by the National Endowment for Soil and Water Conservation and the Du Pont Company, which awards $1,000 to each of three national winners.

"The purpose of the awards program is to salute farmers and ranchers who are implementing sound, innovative and cost-effective conservation techniques," says Emmett Barker, Endowment chairman. "These outstanding farmers and ranchers deserve special recognition and through this program their conservation initiatives are brought to the attention of other agricultural producers and the public."

A conservation farmer/rancher will be selected from each state by coordinating committees of farm, conservation, and government leaders. The Endowment Technical Advisory Committee will review the conservation work of the 50 state nominees selecting 10 national finalists on the basis of their accomplishments in soil and water resource management and pollution abatement.

The 10 national finalists and their spouses will receive an expense-paid trip to Washington to attend a national awards ceremony in the fall. Three national winners will be selected from among the 10 finalists.

Mr. John Harris, county extension agent, distributed and explained calf and cow project books to all members.

The next meeting, scheduled for May 3 at 7:30 p.m., will be held at the Ben Dum farm. "Fitting projects for the round-up" will be the topic.
