diagrams of what will be planted where this season. Karen says, "They want to copy you. Children are fascinated by what you do. It's a good way to raise children here.' Daniel likes to make salad dressings with herbs.

A new outgrowth of their country home will be a country antique shop which Karen hopes to open in June. The shop will be housed in the granary in the barn, adjacent to the workshop where she now prepares and dries her herbs. Karen said she and her husband have collected antiques for 18 years and plan to sell some of those things for which they have no room. To make space for the new shop, Karen moved the children's playroom from the granary to another part of the barn.

She figures the antique shop will fit in perfectly with her sale of "It is another way to get herbs. people to the farm," she points out. She will also be able to market her sheepskins through the shop, and she hopes one day to offer herb breads, herb vinegars and fresh flowers from the garden.

Karen has purposely limited her involvement outside the home, but she does volunteer one day a week working with readiness skills in her son's elementary school. She is also secretary of the vestry and teaches Sunday School in the Episcopal Church in Manheim.

Karen's home in the country has grown into a business for her, but more importantly, it offers her a way of life that allows her to spend time working and playing with her children - time that she feels is invaluable to the next generation.

Karen uses some of her homegrown herbs to make Summer Basil Soup. She says it is a simple summer soup that is delicious either hot or cold. Seasonal vegetables other than zucchini - leeks, turnips or cauliflowerettes, can be finely diced, parbroiled and added to this soup, she suggested.

Summer Basil Soup 1 cup fresh basil leaves 2 garlic cloves, minced

2 tablespoons treshly grated Parmesan cheese Olive oil

6-8 cups homemade chicken stock

1 cup broken-up spaghetti or other thin pasta

2 small zucchini, cut into 1/4 inch slices

Salt and freshly ground pepper

1. In a mortar, pound basil leaves together with the garlic and parmesan cheese Add enough olive oil so that the misture will turn into a smooth, thick paste.

2. In a large casserole heat the chicken stock. Add the spaghetti and cook, covered, until barely tender (about 10 minutes).

3. Add the zucchini and cook for 10 minutes or until it is tender.

4. Season the soup with salt and pepper. Whisk in the basil paste and serve immediately.
