

Schwartz gives seminars

series of seminars on poultry diseases in tropical climates and the Pennsylvania avian influenza situation in Mexico, Guatemala, Costa Rica, and Panama.

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, May 12, 1984—B31

In addition to taking part in various conferences and seminars with poultry health officials, Dr. Schwartz visited numerous farms, advising on health and disease problems. His trip was sponsored by the American Soybean Association.

The Penn State veterinarian has been working closely with federal-state task force officials and poultry industry representatives in southeastern Pennsylvania in eradicating the avian influenza virus which has killed more than 11 million chickens and turkeys since last fall.

In his Latin American presentations, Dr. Schwartz stressed that there is no treatment for avian influenza, however, in outbreaks where the birds are not killed and buried, they can be medicated with antibiotics and vitamins with electrolytes as supportive therapy to combat secondary diseases.
