Inspection revised

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has adopted new regulations for the inspection and certification of the quality of agricultural and vegetable seed effective June 1.

James E. Springfield, an official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the regulations authorize a new system of lot inspection in which official sampling and sealing can be done by cooperating states. They also allow an increase in fees charged for inspection and certification of seed.

Springfield said the inspection and certification program is conducted under the Agricultural Marketing Act on a voluntary, fee-for-service basis and fees equal to operating costs must be collected for the service. He said the increase in fees to $23.40 is necessary to meet today's operating costs. The current fee of $13.20 was established in 1974.

The new system of lot inspection is an effort to provide this service at the lowest cost possible. Actual testing of the seed still will be done at AMS' Federal Seed Laboratory in Beltsville, Md.

New regulations are available from Donald W. Ator, chief, Seed Branch, rm. 2603-S, Seed Division, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250. Phone: (202) 447-9340.
