

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This year I've had not only more strawberries and sugar peas than I knew what to do with, but also many, many flowers. First came the many varieties of tulips that Judy brought from the Netherlands. Then the daffodils with their mixture of shapes and colors. And, I'm surprised that even though it is past the middle of June, the white violets are still blooming profusely.

This spring I picked armfuls of large colorful iris. Their colors ranged from white to a deep brown. My favorites were the orchid-colored ones. On Memorial Day I took some to my parents' and sisters' graves. They also have a delicate fragrance which I am fond of. There were so many corms, when I replanted the bed, that now they've overflowed into the field back of our house. I'd be glad to share them with anyone who would enjoy them.

Now, when people come here to buy berries and peas, I often send them away with a bouquet of tall, dark blue larkspur and some perennial coreopsis. The latter is a bright golden yellow, semi-double daisy and forms a nice contrast.

As usual many of the flower seeds that I planted did not come up for me. Since they are on a southern slope, I think the rains washed too much soil on them. Anyway, I did purchase a few annuals like scarlet sage, ruffled hybrid zinnias and a few petunias. You'd think that with fifty or more houseplants to put out in the flower bed, I wouldn't need to buy anymore. But, when it comes to flowers — the more the merrier.
