

Block restricts handling of government-owned farm property

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block today directed the Farmers Home Administration to follow three initiatives to minimize the impact which the sale of government-owned property would have on local farm real estate values.

"Despite the positive steps we have taken to strengthen the overall operating position of agriculture, I recognize some procedures are still facing a difficult financial period," Block said. "We are particularly concerned about areas where farm real estate values have not fully stabilized, such as the major producing areas of the Midwest."

Block directed all state FmHA offices to: -Fully analyze farm real estate market conditions in each agricultural county and to refrain from selling government property in those areas where real estate values would be adversely impacted.

-Make a concerted effort to review the most appropriate use for unsold government property and, where conditions warrant, lease the property to farmers - particularly family farmers.

-Place the highest priority on the sale of government property to buyers, particularly family farmers who intend to keep these units in appropriate agricultural production. "I feel these actions will underscore our confidence in the underlying financial strength of agriculture," Block said. "They also reflect our confidence that land values in the farming community are stabilizing and in many regions of the country have begun to show new strength."
