

Penn State Dairy Science Club ranks Number 1

UNIVERSITY PARK — Competing against a field of 20, the Penn State Dairy Science Club recently tied for number one club in the United States during the American Dairy Science Association (ADSA) annual meeting at College Station, Texas.

An active organization, the Penn State club sponsors several activities throughout the year, including a Christmas cheese box sale, a Dairy Day at the Nittany Mall, spring dairy judging contest and the annual Dairy Exposition. The newest club activity is the co-sponsorship of the Nittany Lion Fall Classic, a consignment sale scheduled for Nov. 2, in the Ag Arena at Penn State.

Penn State received its outstanding club ranking based on club activities and a display and participation at the ADSA annual meeting.

In addition to the club's recognition, several individual members were honored. Kim Kriebel, Millerstown, was elected officer-at-large of the ADSA student affiliate chapter. William Zollers, Mertztown, received a $1,000 scholarship from Scott Paper Towel, and nine club members were recognized for superior scholastic achievement.

Also, Phil Taylor, Cranesville, served as a national officer this past year, and Dr. Larry Muller, club advisor, completed his three-year term as advisor to the national student group.
