

Ida's Notebook

in White River Junction, Vermont until 11 p.m. We drove and drove through winding roads in heavily-wooded mountains. Most of the day we had showers, but in the afternoon we had to drive through a heavy downpour of rain and hail which made it impossible to see the road. Luckily, we found a roadside rest area and waited for better weather.

At lunch time, we'd ordered a pizza with extra cheese and were amazed to see the huge one that arrived at our table. In fact, it was so large that we took some pieces along and had them for our evening meal plus a big ice cream cone from an Ayrshire dairy near Bennington, Vermont.

On the way to Maine, we stopped to see four families that I'd met on my European trip three years ago. One lived in New York state, two in Vermont and one in New Hampshire.

They were all big Holstein dairy farmers and my husband enjoyed seeing their operations and telling them about his.

My next article will probably tell you about our fishing experiences here in Maine. Let's hope we at least catch something after traveling so far.

Fulton Grange No. 66

OAKRYN — Fulton Grange No. 66 held their regular meeting July 23 at the Grange Hall in Oakryn with the Master, Thomas Galbreath, presiding at the business session. The Women's Activities and Young Marrieds committees reported.

Lecturer Sandy Galbreath presented the program Rebecca Quinn gave a reading, "Summer Creed". The Lecturer read "A Bit Of Wisdom," conducted a quiz on song titles and an action song "Row, Row, Row Your Boat". Mr. and Mrs. Roger Small gave a slide presentation, "Tulip Time Around

The World". Small is a well-known local photographer and has traveled extensively.

Fulton Grange's annual picnic will be held on the Grange Hall grounds August 13 at 7 p.m. Rolls, butter and beverage will be provided. Families attending should bring a meat dish, another dish and place settings. Solanco FFA students and an Ag teacher who attended the National FFA convention in Kansas City will tell about their trip and the convention, and there will be games for everyone.
