

Susan Blendt crowned 1984-Delaware Dairy Princess

NEWARK, Del. — Susan Blendt, Delaware Dairy Princess for 1984-85. A senior majoring in agricultural economics and agricultural education at the University of Delaware, the attractive 20-year-old grew up on a dairy farm and would like to become a county extension agent when she has completed her studies. She is the daughter of Carlton and Betty Blendt.

This summer Susan is working for the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service as a pest management field scout, surveying corn.

special ceremony Wednesday, July 25, at the Delaware State Fair. Over the coming year Susan will make personal appearances on behalf of the dairy industry, explaining the merits of milk and other dairy products to school children, shoppers and others. She will also attend regional and national dairy events.

Delaware's first dairy princess was Ann Sheats Van Ogtrop. The contest was initiated in 1969 by local dairy industry members for the purpose of promoting milk and milk products. Besides Parry and Van Ogtrop, other former princesses present at this year's event were Joy Gooden, Jo Ann Stafford Dawson, Cathy Biggs Vogl, Betsy Cook Morris, Marion Hopkins, Lynn Bullen, and Holly Webb.
