Poultry export talks urged

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The United States Senate has passed a resolution calling for speedy negotiations to provide relief for American poultry and egg exporters from unfair foreign competition. U.S. Senator Howell Heflin cosponsored the resolution.

Heflin noted that the United States has been engaged in trade negotiations for three years and that "if this problem is not resolved quickly, the U.S. may find it no longer has a poultry industry due to the subsidized competition from Europe and Brazil."

"The share of the poultry product export market held by the United States between 1964 and 1983 decreased from 97 to 13 percent, while the share held by the European Community rose from 3 to 46 percent during that time period," Heflin said. "The share of U.S. egg exports in the same markets has fallen from over 250,000 cases shipped in 1981 to about 50,000 cases in 1982 and an estimated zero cases in 1983."

"The American poultry and egg industry has always been willing to do battle with foreign competition, but on terms that reward the most efficient producers, not growers who have talked their governments into granting them huge export assistance programs," The Alabama Democrat asserted. "For example, government subsidies give the French exporter a 15 percent price advantage over his American counterpart"
