

Swiss repeats as supreme champion in Lawrence County dairy show

BY BARBARA RADER

NEW CASTLE — "Lake Lane Fancy C," an aged Brown Swiss owned by Jeffrey Kennedy, repeated last year's performance by taking the supreme champion honors in the open dairy show at the Lawrence County Fair this year.

More than 300 head of dairy cattle competed in the show.

Fancy is well known in show circles. Last year she was selected the Reserve All-American five-year-old in the Brown Swiss Bulletin's nationwide contest.

The Kennedys, of Four Seasons Farm, showed the reserve champion in the open show, four-year-old Four Seasons Nellson

Karen, along with the junior and reserve junior champions. Many blue ribbons were awarded to the family during the Swiss competition.

Show judge Ralph Turley made his selections in keen competition in the Holstein Show. Three-year-old "Peaceful-Terrain Marvex Olivia," owned by Amooore Farm, received the senior and grand champion honors.

The Premier Breeder and

Premier Exhibitor banners went to Albert Hogg and family, who exhibited nine head. They were honored as showing the best owned and bred, which was their reserve champion of the Holstein Show.

Robert and Dave Minor won the Ron Mitcheltree Memorial Trophy, sponsored by the Tim Sturgeon family, for the best uddered Holstein of the show.

spot. Another Clark entry took the junior champion title and Diana Moore of Ladybug Jersey Farm showed the reserve junior champion.

Homestead Acres won both the grand champion and reserve champion Ayrshire honors, with "Ash Avenue Supreme," an aged cow, and "Homestead Acres G.B. Gretta," a five-year-old. The Rader family of Homestead Acres won a string of blue ribbons in the group and individual classes. Taking junior champion was James Bauder and the reserve junior title went to Janice Schultheis.
