

UNIVERSITY PARK — Nancy Wallace, Westmoreland County Extension home economist, has been awarded a Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Extension Home Economics during the association's national meeting in New York City on Sept. 10 to 14.

Wallace was cited for her program, which stresses family resource management and family strengths. She has conducted a number of workshops for county parents on developing self-esteem in their children and themselves.

She has also used learn-at-home packets to reach clientele.

"Families Managing in the 80s" helped 250 families learn to reevaluate financial situations, maintain budgets and set financial goals. A member of the state program task force, Wallace co-authored one of the lessons.

"Toddler Topics," a special series, has reached 6,500 county parents during the nine years it has been offered. A recent survey showed that, as a result of the series, parents and caregivers were improving home safety conditions and increasing communication skills.

Wallace was the first county staff person to serve as visiting extension specialist at Penn State. She provided state leadership in family sociology for part of 1981-82.

A graduate of Indiana University of Pennsylvania, Wallace received a bachelor's degree in home economics education and a master's degree in business with an emphasis on human resources and personnel management.

Wallace has been president and treasurer of the Pennsylvania Association of Extension Home Economists. She also holds membership in the American and Pennsylvania Home Economics Associations and the Electrical Women's Roundtable.
