

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

It is so easy to form habits and so hard to break them. Good habits help us to get through our days without concentrating on little things. We just naturally do our regular jobs without too much thought. Every morning after breakfast, I feed my goldfish and every night after supper I feed the dog. I usually work in the garden in the evening until it becomes dark.

So, when something else is scheduled, it is hard to change gears and "remember." I've missed two evening appointments because I was picking quarts of cherry tomatoes or picking edible soybeans. Not until the next day did it occur to me that I'd missed a meeting.

One meeting that I didn't miss was a dinner meeting at my church with a group of ladies from the Greek Orthodox church in Lancaster. Even though there are differences in our liturgy, I was surprised at the similarities in our faith. It was an opportunity that few people have to discuss their church's history with others.

One recent Saturday, my husband and I drove to Clinton County to see some corn test plots. We were surprised to see several couples that we knew. The grading and drying machinery is quite huge and modern. I think that I am invited to come along to act as chauffeur because my husband's arthritis bothers him if he drives a long distance. Again, habit dictated that I should pack a lunch, as we've always carried our food with us on trips. But this time he assured me that it wasn't necessary.

To break the monotony of the drive, we stopped in Snyder County at a farm market and bought a loaf of homemade brown bread and a jar of chow-chow to enjoy later.
