Sheetz outlines ag laws

HARRISBURG — Two new agriculture-related laws will benefit Pennsylvania farmers beginning this fall, according to Rep. Terry Scheetz (R-Lancaster County).

Scheetz reminded farmers that they no longer need to post "no trespassing" signs to protect their fields from crop damage by hunters. Act 37 of 1984, which Scheetz authored, specifically prohibits sportsmen from hunting and trapping on unharvested fields without permission from farmers who own the property.

"It's particularly appropriate that the law takes effect this hunting season," explained Scheetz. "Recent rains are causing a later harvest than usual, and there is a great deal of standing corn in the state."

The Lancaster County lawmaker said the prohibition against hunting in harvested fields will be enforced by state game wardens unless the property is 'posted' by the owner.

"State game officials will be busy enforcing the new law," added Scheetz. "I hope property owners will be patient with game wardens as they work on its proper enforcement."

"Instructions regarding the new law have been printed in game magazines and included in hunters' license information packets, so voluntary compliance should also work in our favor."

A second measure, recently adopted by the Pennsylvania General Assembly, will also work to the farmers' advantage. Act 167 of 1984, signed into law by the governor this month, exempts free-standing grain bins and corn cribs from local real estate taxes.

"Silos have been exempt from property taxes for years," Scheetz said. "This new law ensures fairness in the application of local taxes on farmers who use different forms of feed and feed-storage facilities."

The new law was signed by the governor Oct. 11 and was effective immediately.

Hesston reports loss

HESSTON, Ks. — Faced with further deterioration of farm equipment markets, Hesston Corporation reported a loss of $4,525,000, or $1.37 per share, on sales of $39,952,000 for the third quarter ended Sept. 30. The company's loss for the first nine months is $1,771,000, or $.74 per share, on sales of $145,520,000.

For the third quarter last year, Hesston earned $2,675,000, or $.70 per share (assuming no dilution), on sales of $54,046,000. For the first nine months of 1983, earnings were $4,695,000, or $1.13 per share (assuming no dilution), on sales of $155,496,000.

"With low commodity prices and continuing high interest rates, farmers are being quite cautious in buying new equipment. Because of the very substantial excess capacity of the farm equipment industry, as compared to the low demand of the farmer, intense competition is going on in the marketplace. All manufacturers are offering special discounts and rebates at high levels; therefore, the squeeze on margins continues," said Howard L. Breneman, chief executive officer of the company.
