CONNEAUT LAKE — The Crawford County Extension Banquet and annual meeting was the place to be Nov. 8, at the Conneaut Lake Stable Pit and Pub.

Dr. Kenneth A. Markley, featured speaker for the evening gave those attending food for thought with pointers on "how to continue to grow up," which he feels is one of the most important things in life. The well-known psychologist and author humorously illustrated six "Marks of Maturity." He stressed that people must learn to be realistic, exercise patience, cooperate with others, make decisions, not expect perfection and to reach out to others. These each reflect true maturity. "Maturity is not old age," he emphasized.

Markley, who lives in Camp Hill, Pa. brought smiles to everyone's faces when he illustrated just how unrealistic Americans are." The bestsellers in America today are cookbooks, and diet books. Everyone wants to eat more and weigh less!"

Dr. Homer Mazer, NW Pa. Assistant Director of Extension, thanked those in the county for their help in making the ag arena at Penn State a reality and for the funds to computerize county extension offices. "There soon will be two computers in each extension office in Pennsylvania," he said. Most importantly he commended the Crawford County Extensions' dedicated individuals for their "top quality program."

John Tautin, president of the Extension Executive Committee, conducted other business including nominations and elections of new executive committee members.

Betty Lou Miller, NW Pa. Lamb and Wool Queen drew the winning tickets for the door prizes.
