Schedule set for popular World Dairy Expo

MADISON, Wisc. - "World Dairy Expo has in the past 19 years become a fall tradition for dairy farmers," according to Brad Rugg, World Dairy Expo's executive vice president. "In keeping with Expo's tradition of quality, we've planned a wellrounded program with something of interest for the entire dairy farm family.

World Dairy Expo, the world's largest international trade show for dairy farmers, will be held October 2 through 6 at the Dane county Exposition Center in Madison, Wis. Over 400 commercial exhibitors will feature the latest available dairy farm technology, products and services.

Educational speakers programs are scheduled four times daily Wednesday through Saturday in the Education Tent. The programming has been designed to provide valuable information to dairymen to help weather the current economic storm.

Dairy experts will speak on topics such as "Profitable Udder Health Decisions That Insure Your Future," "Management - It Does Make The Difference," "Farm Outlook for 1986," and "Combining Art, Science and Common Sense in a Breeding Program."

The presidents of the six national breed associations whose animals participate at World Dairy Expo will form a panel to discuss "Our Breed in 1995." Another item of interest in the Education Tent will be a display of finalists in fieldcured hay and haylage divisions from the World's Second Forage Analysis Super Bowl.

In addition to the commercial exhibits and Education Tent features, World Dairy Expo will host five dairy cattle shows of national status and one regional show. Ayrshire, Brown Swiss, Guernsey, Holstein, Jersey and Milking Shorthorns, expected to number over 1600 head, will compete for laurels.

Youth from across the United States will travel to Expo to participate in National 4-H, Intercollegiate and FFA dairy cattle judging contests and junior showmanship contests.

An informative ladies program, The Craft Forum, will feature daily style shows, craft and food demonstrations and informative speakers. Farm and urban dwellers alike will enjoy the variety of hand-crafted items on sale and the opportunity to purchase dairy-related gift items from The Purple Cow Gift Shop.

Farm Safety Tips

The only reasonable action that can be taken is to provide ventilation into the storage and wait for rescue personnel with the proper equipment. Barn fans and silo blowers are sources of ventilation that may be used. However, do not lower fans into the pit because of possible methane gas buildup.

Uncovered storages at ground level should be fenced to keep people and animals off the crustlike surface that normally develops. The surface crust may harden in very dry or extended cold periods, but the hardening will be uneven.

As the crust softens with changing weather conditions, a person or animal can suddenly break through. Do not leave ladders leaning against above ground tank storages. A person who accidentally falls into the tank will be trapped because he or she will be unable to climb the smooth surface.

near open storages and above ground tanks, and a rescue pole and rope should be appropriately located in the area. Remember to warn visitors and guests of the hazards of manure storages because you are legally responsible for their safety while on your property.

Warning signs should be placed

Bedell hits USDA's export bonus plan

WASHINGTON - U.S. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, chairman of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Department Operations, Research, and Foreign Agriculture, has scheduled a hearing to review the U.S. Department of Agriculture's export payment-in-kind (PIK) program.

The hearing will be 9:30 a.m. on Oct. 1 in 1302 Longworth House Office Building.

"From all reports, USDA's export bonus program has been plagued by problems and missteps from the start," Bedell said. 'Even the Department's own export PIK advisory committee has urged that the program be radically changed or scrapped. The subcommittee wants to find out what's wrong with the program and what must be done to assure it's success."

USDA's export bonus program, called Bonus Incentive Commodity Export Program (Bicep), was to use government-provided bonuses of grain as lures to sell U.S. farm products abroad. In the four months since the program was announced, it has not led to any additional sales of U.S. grain.

"The program was apparently set up wrong in the beginning, and no attempts have been made to correct the problems," Bedell said.

Included in the House Agriculture Committee's recently approved 1985 Farm Bill is a much broader export bonus program. The USDA program has been limited to wheat and is aimed at very few countries.

"U.S. farm exports have dropped sharply since their peak in 1981," Bedell said. "We need a strong, aggressive export program, but USDA's very limited program has fallen far short of the need."
