you to read. However, don't clutter your room with stacks of them.

Wall accessories aren't confined to pictures. Wood carvings, mirrors, sconces, clocks, rugs, stitchery hangings, old keys and even small items picked up in antique shops can all be used successfully on a wall, often in interesting combinations.

Accessories should appear in harmony with the space and furnishings around it. Don't hang it alone on a wall just to fill up an empty space.

Don't hang items too high. All wall accessories should be hung low enough so that they appear as a unit with other furnishings nearby.

Plants and flower arrangements also add interest to a room, but should not overwhelm the space. For example, consider the texture and proportion to the furniture they're placed on. The simple strong lines of a Parson's table is complemented by a lacy, trailing plant.

Basic guidelines used to accessorize a room are:

- Use carefully chosen accessories on the basis of their relationships of color and shape.
- Plan your accessories so that they will enhance your decorating plan and harmonize with other furnishings.
- Select well-designed accessories of good quality.
- Arrange accessories according to some planned use of space.

Carefully Follow Instructions For Wool Garment Care

Woolen skirts, pants, vests and blazers all need proper care to look their best. Wool easily keeps a naturally well groomed look if recommended care procedures are followed.

You should allow your woolen clothing to rest and give them an airing between wearings so they can shed wrinkles naturally. Tiny wool fibers have an elastic quality and will return to their original positions if they rest at least 24 hours on a well-shaped hanger.

In a closet, allow space between garments so air can circulate. This gives the fabric a chance to breathe and regain freshness.

Refresh a wool garment quickly after wearing or unpacking by placing it on a hanger and hanging it in the bathroom while you bathe or shower. Moisture in the air will steam wrinkles away. However, allow the garment to dry thoroughly before you wear it.

Brushing helps revive a tired garment. Use a firm-bristled brush to get rid of soil particles, fluff the nap and rejuvenate the surface of a firmly woven wool fabric.

For finer fabrics with a soft nap, use a damp sponge to achieve the same results. A sponge effectively removes lint from most fabric surfaces. Steam press woolens as needed.

Labels specify care instructions - "dry clean only, machine wash, hand wash with warm water." Today's woolens offer an option on methods of cleaning, but the option to follow is the one specified on the garment's label.

Adding the Final Touch to a Room
Accessories provide the finishing touch to a room in the same way that shoes, handbag and jewelry complete a costume.

But don't use all your accessories at once, just as you would not wear all your jewelry at the same time.

A room also looks cluttered when too many small accessories are scattered about. Instead, store some things, and occasionally change those you display.

Accessories are often purely decorative, serving an aesthetic purpose. But even primarily functional accessories such as lamps and pillows should be well-designed and blend in with the decorative scheme of the room.

Books and magazines are useful accessories that give a lived-in look to a room. Placed on a table near a chair or couch, they invite
