Hershey Bears captain Don Nachbaur agrees with the "Make it Milk" billboards in the Hershey Arena. "I drink a truckload," Don says. Cocoa, the mascot, is no slouch either, he indicates in pantomime. The two billboards, purchased by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, are aimed at the non-milk-drinking adults. Over a million spectators will see the sales message in 1986.

Hershey's Nachbauer drinks milk by the truckload

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania dairymen have a friend in Don Nachbaur, captain of the Hershey Bears league leading ice hockey team.

Is he a regular milk drinker?

"I drink a truckload of milk," he told Bill Smedley of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program when asked last week.

Then, to make his point, the all star center posed for a picture championing Pennsylvania's number one beverage.

The 26-year-old star from western Canada is constantly reminded to keep up his milk drinking habit.

Two Hershey Arena billboards purchased by the dairy program advise hockey players and fans to "Make it Milk". Nachbaur gets the message at daily practices and 40 home games.

Total attendance at Hershey

Bear games this year should exceed 200,000, it is estimated by Doug Yingst of the Bear front office. Another 800,000 will see the billboards while attending ice shows, basketball games, banquets and other events.

"No tax money is used for our advertising program," says Don Duncan, chairman of the dairy promotion advisory board. "We receive our funds from over 4,000 state dairymen."

Soft drink and beer billboards also flash their sales pitches in the Hershey Arena, the Berks county dairymen notes.

"It's the battle of the beverages," Duncan emphasizes. "But the payoff's big for milk producers. Our only question is whether to double the size of the billboards for the 1986-87 hockey season."

Something's paying off for Don Nachbaur and the battling Hershey Bears, too. After missing the American Hockey League playoffs in 1985, the current team leads the Southern division by a wide margin, and already has guaranteed a berth in the Calder Cup series this spring.

Furman honored

HARRISBURG — The Furman Canning Company of Northumberland "has again demonstrated its leadership role in Pennsylvania agriculture" with a $5,388 donation to the Pennsylvania Vegetable Research Program, according to State Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Grubb.

"Furman's continued support of research benefits everyone in the state's vegetable industry," Grubb said.

The contribution will be added to a grower supported assessment fund used to underwrite research into new and improved vegetable varieties and disease control.
