Miller Exclusives:

Controlled Penetration

Disc penetration is directly related to weight and blade angle. Miller discs have high weight per foot of cutting width. Blade angle on offsets ranges up to 26°. Instead of a fixed gang angle, this weight-angle feature allows increased penetration...with ready adjustment to seedbed preparation to avoid repeat trips across the field.

Reduced Compaction

The unique blade angles on Miller discs allow blades to enter the soil parallel to the frame to help avoid soil compaction.

Exclusive blade design

Blades are custom manufactured to Miller specifications. Concavity of front blades is less for maximum slicing action; greater curvature on rear throws soil more vigorously. Matched front-rear blade design increases capacity of machine, adds greatly to performance and residue incorporating capability.

Round Shafts For Strength

Gang shaft sizes are upscaled in Miller discs...and all shafts are round. This round shape flexes and absorbs more shock than comparable square shafts.
