

Inter-State Names Couples to Attend Conference

SOUTHAMPTON — Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative has named two young farmer representatives to attend the 13th annual Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives Couples Conference July 16-18 at the Sheraton Inn, Danville.

Beverly and Stephanie McKay, Millwood, Va., and Larry and Paula Harnish, Washington Boro, will be among 45 couples who will learn about cooperative practices and policies.

The manager of a store specializing in floor covering, Stephanie is on the board of directors and is secretary of the Top of Virginia Home Builders Association.

The Harnishes were Inter-State Young Cooperators in 1984. They operate a 200-acre dairy and swine farm, where they milk 60 Holsteins and finish 400 swine.

Both are active members of the Manor Brethren in Christ Church. In addition, Larry is the chief of his local volunteer fire company, and Paula is a 4-H leader.

The theme of this year's PAFC conference is "Cooperatives: A Bridge To Your Future." According to PAFC Executive Secretary Kathy E. Gill, the conference is designed to increase cooperative understanding by exposing couples to cooperative directors, management and staff.

Former Young Cooperators, the McKays recently completed a three-year term on Inter-State's Young Cooperator (YC) Consultant Committee. In 1983, Bev competed as a single contestant in the YC contest and was named runner-up.

The McKays operate a 500-acre dairy farm and milk over 60 Holsteins. Active in farm organizations, Bev is vice chairman of the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee and is on the Dairy Herd Improvement Association's board of directors.

Burger King Joins Real Seal

Burger King serves only genuine dairy cheese, milkshakes and milk. To let its customers know, the nation's second largest fast food chain recently joined American Dairy Association's "REAL" Seal program for restaurants.

The Seal is used exclusively to identify genuine dairy foods. A registered trademark of United Dairy Industry Association, it helps inform consumers at a glance that they are purchasing real dairy products.

Burger King has been authorized by American Dairy Association to display the "REAL" Seal in its 4,200 U.S. restaurants in conjunction with milk, American and Cheddar cheese, and vanilla, chocolate and strawberry shakes. The chain, with headquarters in Miami, joins McDonald's, Hardee's, Domino's and more than 4,000 other chain and independent restaurants in displaying the "REAL" Seal.

American Dairy Association conducts advertising, sales promotion, foodservice and publicity programs on behalf of real dairy foods as part of the total dairy promotion program of United Dairy Industry Association.
