

Heagy, Grumbine Show Lebanon's Top Market Hogs

BY JACK HUBLEY

LEBANON — Former Penn State swine specialist Matt Parsons came down from Massachusetts this week and found Pennsylvania pork to be in good trim. Parsons, who currently runs a swine consulting business and came south to judge the Lebanon Fair's market hog show on Monday, remarked that the show was characterized by good quality pigs all the way through.

One pig that caught his eye, though, was a Duroc-Yorkshire gilt shown by Shelby Heagy of Lebanon. "She did the best job of combining muscling, leanness and volume," said Parsons. The show's grand champion was bred by Miss Heagy's grandfather, Leon Arnold, a well-known Lebanon breeder. Sired by the "Extra" boar owned by Leon's brother, Larry, the top porker was also heavyweight division champion at 240 pounds.

Miss Heagy also had the show's lightweight champion, sired by the same boar. The daughter of Pat Heagy, Shelby is in seventh grade at Cedar Crest Middle School. Although she has shown champions at the county roundup, this was her first grand champion at the county fair.

She exhibits both beef and swine, but prefers swine in the showing. "They're easier to train," she says. Another one of her grandfather's pigs placed third in carcass competition.

At reserve was a 230-pound gilt shown by Daryl Grumbine. Bred by Roger Bankert of Hanover, the Poland-Duroc cross was one of three pigs that Grumbine bought at a sale in March. Another one of this trio placed fifth in the carcass show.

The son of Dennis and Barbara Grumbine, Daryl is a freshman at Elco High School and a seven-year veteran of the 4-H program.

Following are results of the market hog show.
