Heifer Feeding Brochure From Upjohn

KALAMAZOO, Mich. - Cattlemen know the economic advantage to feeding heifers is to turn lower purchase prices into a plus by feeding the cattle as efficiently as possible, says James R. Piotrowski, D.V.M., technical service veterinarian for The Upjohn Company, in a heifer feeding brochure recently published by Upjohn.

"Heifers can present problems for the cattle feeder if they are not managed properly," the veterinarian states. "Cycling heifers cause reduced performance and increased injuries due to riding and pen disturbances. Pregnant heifers are a liability, due to their docking at slaughter and reduced yields, and as a result, feeders have found spaying to be an alternative."

Feedlot heifer management, including feeding of MGA (melengestrol acetate) to keep heifers from heat cycling, is discussed by a university extension veterinarian and a feedlot manager.
