

Case IH Shows Magnum Tractors

extremely slow speeds required for specialty crop planting and harvesting.

A simple on-the-go switch engages the mechanical-front-drive (MFD) option, allowing the operator to quickly switch from two-wheel-drive to the MFD mode.

New Cab

A new cab incorporates the latest in ergonomic design. With more than 47 square feet of glass, the cab provides unparalleled visibility for field operations. Case IH designed the exhaust stack to be completely out of view from the driver's seat, providing a panoramic view of the field.

The cab features more head and shoulder room than comparable tractors. A right-hand console with carefully placed tractor controls make operation easy and efficient. A full-feature seat with both left and right swivel and a wide, adjustable left-hand armrest further contribute to operator comfort.

Advanced Manufacturing

To manufacture this new tractor series, Case IH has completely redesigned the production line at its Racine, Wisconsin, manufacturing facility. The new line incorporates manufacturing procedures and quality assurance concepts that will become standard for all future products.

All tractors must meet strict quality standards at each step of assembly before proceeding to the next step in the assembly process. Quality control systems include a "hot test" room where inspectors ensure that all tractors pass functional tests on engine, transmission, hydraulics, hitch and brakes; and a computer-monitored testing station that checks 103 items on every cab to ensure all systems are functioning properly.

Worker involvement is another key to ensuring that the new manufacturing process produces the highest-quality tractors. Quality Assurance Assembler teams follow tractors through each certification zone to ensure that the tractor passes every required standard. In addition, workers are responsible for stopping the assembly line if, in their opinion, quality is being compromised.
