

Chefs Demonstrate Creativity At Ag Progress

ROCK SPRINGS (Centre) — Tantalizing smells drew people to the Meating Place where they were treated to tastes of culinary creations by professional chefs during Ag Progress Days. Certified executive chefs, Steve Huszti and Ted Potter alternated 45-minute cooking demonstrations using beef, veal, pork, and lamb.

While cooking veal, Huszti urged viewers to add the things they like to eat and take out the things they don't like in recipes. "Don't be afraid to change a recipe. Don't limit your creativity. Always use your imagination and think 'how can I do this a little different from everyone else.'"

Huszti is the chief chef at the Treadway Inn in Lancaster with 60 people under him and is a member of the American Culinary Federation. Potter also is a ACF member and works as chef consultant for Naylor Wine Cellars in Stewartstown. The two frequently present demonstrations, many of which are performed for charity with the proceeds going to help that organization.

This is the second year for the (Turn to Page B19)

Ted Potter, a chef consultant with Naylor Wine Cellars in Stewartstown, demonstrates how to prepare several dishes using beef.

A crowd of hungry people watched chefs Steve Huszti and Ted Potter prepare meals using beef, veal, lamb, and pork. When each dish was finished viewers were able to sample it.
