

Jansma Promoted To Associate Dean, International Programs

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre) — Dr. J. Dean Jansma has been promoted from assistant dean and director of international agricultural programs in the College of Agriculture at Penn State to associate dean for international agricultural programs in the College of Agriculture effective July 1.

"The promotion recognizes the importance of international programs in the college and the role Dr. Jansma plays in enhancing this effort," said Dr. Lamartine F. Hood, dean of the College of Agriculture. "The increased activity in our international programs is a tribute to the good work he has done during his relatively short tenure in this position."

Jansma was named assistant dean in 1984. His responsibilities include planning, developing and coordinating management and financing of international programs and studies in the College of Agriculture.

Since 1981 he has had overall responsibility for the development and implementation of the Swaziland Cropping Systems and Extension Training Project, supported by a $9.6 million contract from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

He was recently elected chairperson of the Board of Trustees of the Southeast Consortium for International Development, an organization representing 33 universities engaged in agriculture and related development activities in developing countries.

Jansma is a professor of agricultural economics. Prior to his appointment to the international office, he taught courses in resource economics and international agriculture and conducted research in rural development and resource economics policy.

During his nearly 20 years in the Department of Agricultural Economics and Rural Sociology, Jansma was primary academic advisor to more than 20 graduate students from developing countries. He also participated in designing and developing international agricultural projects in Africa and Asia.

Before coming to Penn State, Jansma was employed as an agricultural economist with USDA, a research analyst with the U.S. Government and a research assistant at Iowa State University.

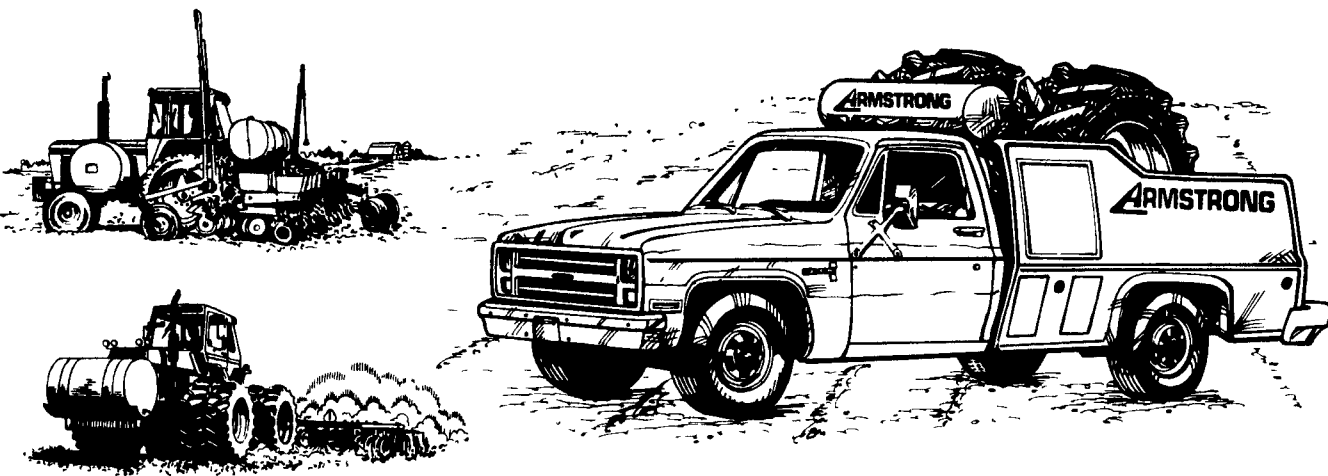

He has a bachelor of science and master of science degrees from Iowa State and a Ph.D. from Oklahoma State University.
