a heavy presumption that laws enacted by the General Assembly are constitutional. Anyone challenging the constitutionality must prove a statute is in clear violation of the state constitution in order to win his challenge. Also, in interpreting state constitutional amendments, our courts look beyond the bare language of the amendment to the history surrounding the amendment's adoption and approval by the legislature and the voters of Pennsylvania. A look at the history of the proposed constitutional amendment and tax reform legislation show that farms and farmland were intended by the legislature and are understood to be intended by the voters. Sure, tax reform "may" be unconstitutional, just as the sun "may" not rise tomorrow. The real question is whether either is likely to happen.

FARM FORUM OUR READERS WRITE

Thirdly, while it is true that some capital gains effects may arise under tax reform, such a statement cannot be considered in a vacuum. The taxability of income under local tax reform will be determined by state income tax laws. Our state laws provide several capital gains exclusions and deferrals which will be applicable to local income taxation, including the $100,000 exclusion for sale of a primary residence by a person 55 years old and older and the nonrecognition of gain on proceeds used to replace property items lost through involuntary occurrences such as condemnation and fire. Also, if a farmer would sell to his son and receive payment monies in installment rather than lump-sum, only that portion of the capital gains related to those payments actually received during the year would be taxable. These examples show that the real effects of local taxation of capital gains may not be nearly as great as originally perceived.

Finally, neither the May 6 article nor any other news article seem to be focusing on what opponents of Act 145 are offering in its place to bring about true tax reform. There is a keen interest and support for reform of our outmoded and unfair system of local taxation in this state. Why, then, have those legislators spearheading opposition for Act 145 offered no alternative solution to bring about needed reforms? Why did many of these same legislators vote in favor of a tax reform proposal last year that was nearly identical to the legislation proposed in Act 145? Do you think the General Assembly will be willing to deal with the issue of tax reform if the voters of Pennsylvania register a negative vote on Act 145? Given the fact that it has taken nearly a decade for our legislature to deal with the issue of tax reform at all, the prospects are not likely.

People can speculate on the positive and negative effects of Act 145 on various taxpaying groups. One thing is certain, however. A "no" vote on the referendum ballot question will guarantee that Pennsylvanians will be stuck with our current local taxing system, which continues to impose heavy real property tax burdens and provides local governments the means to tax everything but income, for many years to come.

Spelling Bee

NARVON (Lancaster Co.) — The Red Rose Alliance will host their second spelling bee at the Caernarvon Fire Hall, Rt. 23, Churchtown, on Saturday, May 13, at 7:00 p.m.

The four classes will consist of children, adults, general and Pennsylvania Dutch. Admission is $2.

For additional fun, the Alliance will also auction mystery packages after the spelling bee. Entertainment is provided by Don Dipper, magician.

The Red Rose Alliance was formed in June of 1981 to oppose the placement of a hazardous waste dump at the Narvon Mine in Eastern Lancaster County and to educate the public on landfilling alternatives.
