

Glatfelter Pulp Wood Protects Wildlife

SPRING GROVE (York Co.) — The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company is the forest management subsidiary of the P.H. Glatfelter Company in Spring Grove, Pennsylvania. The Pulp Wood Company manages more than 100,000 acres of forestland in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware and provides forest management assistance to other forest land owners in that region.

Recent statistics show that forest management efforts in the Pulp Wood Company's Pennsylvania district are producing benefits for more than just the trees. Company activities which are part of its normal harvesting operation, as well as actions that go above and beyond standard operating procedures are also improving the forests for Pennsylvania's wildlife. These activities include protecting existing sources of food, water and shelter and, in some cases, creating more.

Company personnel erected 34 bluebird boxes, 11 more wood duck boxes and 2 goose platforms to encourage nesting in Company lands last year. An additional 22 bluebird boxes were built and donated to scout troops and other groups for placement. Such efforts attract wild species into new areas and supplement existing nesting sites. Preserving "natural" nesting sites is part of Pulp Wood Company activities, too, as den trees are among those trees reserved from harvesting operations.

Wildlife food supplies were both protected and enhanced last year. Food-producing trees such as serviceberry, wild cherry and hickory were purposely left standing in some sale areas and food plots covering 12 acres were developed in others. These plots were seeded with the Pennsylvania Game Commission's Food & Cover mix or a combination of legumes and grasses. 1250 wildlife shrubs, provided by the Game Commission, were also planted, and almost two dozen apple trees were pruned and released from overhead shade. That management practice improves growing conditions and increases the crop of fruit trees that have been swallowed up by our forests.

Twelve springs were protected from impact, creating not only a fresh water supply for wildlife, but often preserving evergreens and acorn producing oaks that furnish food and cover in these same areas. Likewise, buffer zones of mixed hardwoods were left standing on some pine plantation tracts to maintain a diversity and provide erosion control to protect springs and streams.

Pulp Wood Company, lands are open for the use and enjoyment of sportsmen, hikers and bird watchers. As a result, both the wildlife population and the human population benefit from these forest management efforts.

Lely To Distribute Kioti Tractors

WILSON, NC — Luke de Lange, president of Lely Corporation, announced the purchase of the import and distribution rights to the Kioti tractor line for the United States and Canada. This transaction took place in Portland, OR, on July 14, 1989.

The new company, Lely Kioti, Inc., will be based in Wilson, NC. The current distribution system will stay intact as it has been under Kioti Tractor, Inc. To better serve the Lely Kioti dealers the parts distribution will be moved to Wilson, NC.

De Lange stated Lely Kioti will introduce a complete line of accessories for the three models of tractors.
