

The Lebanon Valley National Bank held its fourth annual hog roast this week at the Green Dragon Market ground near Ephrata. Bank President, Albert Murry, told the group of patrons gathered for the noon meal that the people at their bank proudly call themselves "The Agri Bank" and have demonstrated their support of Agriculture by their actions. "We support the farmer both when it is raining or when the sun is shining," Murry said.

Preservation Fund

Southeastern Pennsylvania has shown the highest support for the program, with five counties in this area contributing $2.5 million. The southcentral portion of the state also has committed a fair amount of money to preservation. Berks County was the highest contributor followed by Lancaster, Chester, Bucks, and Montgomery counties.

Counties in these two regions will receive 66 percent of the $25 million in matching funds.

Lancaster, Berks, and Chester counties became the first counties to have their county farmland preservation programs approved by the board. The local programs will establish a priority for purchasing easements.

However, before approving these county guidelines, state Ag Board officials added a restriction prohibiting state or county preservation board members from applying to sell their own conservation easements.

1989 Agricultural Conservation Easement Allocations
