All In The Selling Of A Calf

When the $35,000 calf was sold in the small arena at the Farm Show Building in Harrisburg during the All American Dairy Show last week, teams of sale staff members manned two direct-line phone calls from potential buyers from across the nation. One team was on the phone at the front of the arena and the contending bids came over the phone at the back of the arena. In this sequence of photos, Managing Editor Everett Newswanger caught Auctioneer Harry Bachman in auction as he relayed the bids from the person at the phone to the auction ring above. You be the judge. Did Harry's team win or not?

Only 35. That's right...35. Only 35...thousand.

You gotta give me more time.

Now it's your...turn.

Hold it Mike. Don't knock it off yet.

Come on--Wisconsin!

Did he win? Or didn't he?
