

Keep It Clean

To help eliminate odors from soiled clothing, sprinkle baking soda between each layer as they are placed into the clothes hamper. In addition, a half-cup of baking soda added to the rinse cycle in your washing machine will also help remove odors.

For fast and easy pretreatment of stains, keep a solid, rub-on type stain pretreating product in areas where stains and spills are most likely to occur -- kitchen, family room, nursery, play room, office. In addition, keep the product in a suitcase for pretreating stains when traveling, and near the clothes hamper for treating stains as clothes are dropped in. Pretreating stains as soon as they occur can help in their removal. If treating stain hours or days before washing, be sure to use a product that will stay effective for several days and will not promote mildew.

It is best not to use a stain remover on fluorescent-colored clothes. These clothes may not be colorfast and the colors may fade.

To help remove soap suds when doing hand laundry, add a splash of vinegar to the rinse water. Then, rinse the garments again in clear water to remove the vinegar residue.

To easily clean the clothes dryer lint screen, wipe a used fabric softener sheet over the screen. The softener sheet acts like a magnet to pick up lint.

Campaign Scouts For Favorite NFL Sandwich

CHICAGO, IL — According to a just-released survey by the Deli/Prepared Meats Committee of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, 50 percent of National Football League players responding to a poll eat deli meat sandwiches at least once a week.

Timed for announcement during the playoffs and Super Bowl, the survey will be the front line of a food and sports writers' public relations campaign to create positive impressions about deli meats. The campaign is funded by beef, pork, lamb and veal producer checkoffs, packers and processors.

Survey results and accompanying stories went out to 800 food editors as well as to national and regional sports editors and television producers. USA Today, with a readership of 3.6 million people, ran a story in its December 24 edition.

The first draft choice sandwich was ham on wheat, followed by roast beef and pastrami. Teams taking part in the survey were the Los Angeles Rams, Phoenix Cardinals, San Francisco 49ers, Philadelphia Eagles, Atlanta Falcons, San Diego Chargers, Pittsburgh Steelers, Buffalo Bills and Detroit Lions.

"This kind of creative program really catches the media's eye, as proven by the favorite sandwich survey we did with senators in 1988," says Robert Nissen, Webster City, IA, chairman of the Meat Board Deli/Prepared Meats Committee. "Programs like this have the benefit of complementing private company promotion efforts by helping to establish a more favorable marketing environment for deli meats."

The Meat Board Deli/Prepared Meats Committee conducts media public relations, education and healthcare professional programs to create greater demand for beef, pork, lamb and veal.
