Maryland. The 4-H member made her dress from hot pink fabric. The dress featured a jewel neckline, set-in long sleeves with gathered puffs at the shoulder. The dropped waist had a full gathered skirt with an attached sash. The outfit was accented with handmade lace around the neck, earrings, and black leather heels. Her sheep had matching bows trimmed with lace. Rachael plans to be a doctor.

First place senior winner Gayle Clyde is from Slippery Rock. The 17-year-old daughter of Jim and Jean Clyde said that last year she had fifth place in competition at KILE. She said, "I'm sure my sheep made the difference this year."

Gayle showed a Cheviot and wore a fully-lined gray light-weight two-piece business suit that she made herself. The straight jacket was accented with a red scarf, gold chain brooch, and red and gold earrings. She wore red pumps. She plans to attend Slippery Rock University and major in journalism.

For the third year in a row, Susan Wise placed second in competition at KILE. The 17-year-old daughter of Robert and Linda Wise led her prize-winning Suffolk sheep Martini. Susan has taken top place in Lead Line competition at international junior, national, and state competition.

Susan wore a long black 100 percent Pendleton wool coat that she removed to show a winter-white suit of the same wool. The loose fitting double breasted top
