RCMA Regroups

If you were wondering what would happen to RCMA after losing the Rogers-Allen program in New York you should be happy to know that they're alive and well after their annual meeting in Syracuse last month.

With the election of Lewis Gardner, president of Eastern Milk Producers and now president of RCMA, and the re-election of all the other officers, they're already making plans for ways to get higher milk prices for northeastern producers.

Their move to Syracuse with a smaller staff and reduced space is only to conserve their assets for future efforts for producers.

Carmen Ross, the executive director, will work on a per diem rate and board meetings will be reduced to save money. Already a study committee has been organized to develop a new program from their past experience and one that all segments of the dairy industry will support.

They still face the court battle over compensatory payments but they also have a number of options to consider that can be helpful.

It may be a matter of taking what you can get or settling for a half loaf if you can't have it all but even in these months of rising milk supplies selling for under order prices it should be comforting to know that RCMA is preparing for action and the next opportunity.

PA Premium

The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board took testimony on the effect of the drought on farmers last week.

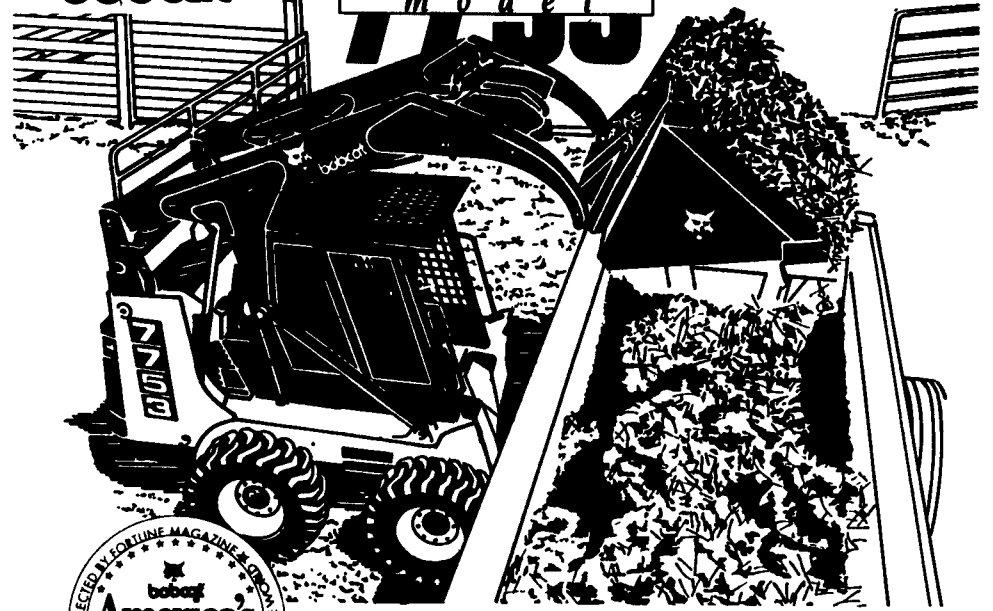

Some groups asked for a 15 cent increase and some for 20 but the Board decided on 25 cents. This is in addition to the present premium of $1.05 which is in place until June 30. So it will be $1.30 on Class I milk produced and processed in Pennsylvania from February to June.

Petitions have already been presented for hearings this spring to extend the premium beyond June 30 just in case there's a need for it.
