Weber Looks Forward To Reunion For FFA Officers

"In a way, I was surprised I got it. Harold Fogel, who was also running, had an older brother, Don, who had been state president. With that kind of insight into the ins and outs of being president, I thought for sure, Harold would get it." One particular member of Weber's team that he vividly recalls is Dan Hackenburg of Middleburg. "Dan was into bees and when all of the rest of us were referring to our 'Honies', Dan was not talking about the same thing - his honey was not his girlfriend, but a hive of insects." Dan today is still a bee specialist and has been President of the Pennsylvania Apiary Association.

"As a national officer, I loved flying around the country - especially when Ralston-Purina carried our team around on their private Lear jet. Several times the pilot would allow me to sit in the co-pilot's chair and this is where my love of flying began." Today Glen Weber is a flight instructor with a multi-engines rating. For the last fifteen years, in his "free time" he has been doing commercial charter work.

After completing his national officer tenure, Glen returned to Penn State University and received his degree in agriculture education and ag economics. He married his high school sweetheart, Lucy Yoder, and began teaching agriculture at Manheim High School in Lancaster County.

Two years later, Lucy and Glen started their own business, a convenience store called Country Acres. "We had our own deli recipes for things such as potato and macaroni salad and we started making potato chips to sell in the store. We took things one step at a time. Pretty soon we had built up to four convenience stores." From potato salad to potato chips, Glenn got into the commercial potato chip manufacturing business. He is now president and owner of King's Potato Chips in Bowmansville. And Lucy, his wife, has one of Lancaster County's most successful catering businesses, All Season's Catering.

Parents of three boys, Glen now can relive FFA experiences through his oldest son, Jason, who is a freshman FFA'er at Garden Spot High School. Glen and his son share a love for the breeding and training of Tennessee walking horses, which are all located on the Weber Farm in Bowmansville. Glen is also President of the Pennsylvania Walking Horse Association.

Is there another Weber in the future of the state FFA and national officer teams? Don't count it out - Jason as a freshman received the Garden Spot Chapter's Star Greenhand Award. And as Glen points out, "The big goal is accomplished by doing the little things, one day at a time."
