bus. A record-breaking 709 head of Angus cattle competed for purple banners, belt buckles, and trophies.

Don Boggs, Brookings, South Dakota, was the breeding cattle judge and selected the champion in the cow-calf pair, bred-and-owned bull, bred-and-owned heifer, and owned heifer categories. The steer judge was Jim Hyer of Porterville, California.

Before selecting his grand champion owned heifer at the conclusion of the four-day show, judge Boggs commended exhibitors on "an awfully good set of functional females." He said the quality of the cattle was only excelled by the quality of the young Angus people.

He then selected Ronan Queen of Wayside M591 for his grand champion owned heifer. Lucas Young of Saybrook, Illinois, was the thrilled owner of the female
