

Judge Melanie Horchler, a former Penn State judging team member and sheep herder, chose Jezebel for the champion FFA sale lamb owned by Lancaster County Dairy Princess Jill Harnish.

LAMPETER (Lancaster Co.)
 — In their final appearance at a county fair, Lisa and Lyndon Reiff again took home most of the trophies with their Suffolk sheep. At the Lampeter Fair on Wednesday, Lyndon was named both champion showman and fitter, while his sister took championships in both market and 4-H sale lamb competition.

Judge Melanie Horchler, a former Penn State judging team member and sheep herder, chose Lisa's 104-pound Suffolk as the top market lamb.

"It's the most complete package," Horchler said of the middle-weight lamb. "It's got lots of style, eye appeal, and carries its depth of muscling from end to end."

"It's going to be my Farm Show sheep," Lisa said of her prize-winning market lamb that had been purchased from Tom Slack, an Indiana breeder. Lisa had a previous reserve champion market lamb at the state Farm Show and is hoping for the top spot this year.

Lisa's 4-H sale lamb, to be sold at the Fair, was described by Horchler as "close to ideal in finish."

Horchler chose Lyndon as the top showman and fitter for having his lamb under control at all times, being relaxed but maintaining good eye contact, and for smoothness and speed in setting the lamb real square with her head up.

In the junior fitting division, Greg Hess came in first with Kyle Harnish being named junior showman.

A new face in the winners' circle was Lancaster County Dairy Princess Jill Harnish, who showed the champion FFA sale lamb named Jezebel. Jill, a Solanco senior did not expect the 132-pound Suffolk to be a champion until she sheared it. "Then I saw what good muscling she had," Jill said. She had purchased the lamb from Bill McCauley of
