Ine use of insecticidal soap is a popular pest control technique for home gardeners. It's easy to mix with water, nontoxic to pets and humans, has no poisonous residue, and it even smells clean! Insecticidal soap is so popular that many people substitute dishwashing and laundry detergents for the commercial insecticidal soap product. This isn't a good idea according to Paul Zorner, a scientist for Mycogen Corporation, Mycogen manufactures Safer's Insecticidal Soap.

According to Dr. Zorner, both types of products are types of fatty acid salts but there is a wide variety of fatty acids and it's not noted on dish or laundry detergents which type of fatty acid is present.

Safer's Insecticidal Soap, also known as M-Pede, is oleic acid. an eighteen carbon chain fatty acid. It is a natural product that kills

AC baler w/4 cyl Wisc engine, needs a little repair, insects on contact but leaves no residue. Some other fatty acids which may have less carbon atoms can work as a herbicide (plant killer) as well as an insecticide. Zorner warns that some of the laundry and dish washing products home gardeners use may act as herbicides, too.

You might have noted this effect on your plants after spraying a homemade soap solution. Some of the plant foliage appears bleached and spotted.

All fatty acids will kill bugs, however, the effectiveness of laundry and dish detergents may not be as great as insecticidal soap or as safe for the plants. Keep this in mind when experimenting with soap sprays.
