Keystone Pork Congress Hosts Range Of Programs

Pork Bowl Has Roots In Church 'Quiz Bowls'

the council was discussing plans for the annual Keystone Pork Congress "and they really wanted to get some youth activities going," said Fairbairn. She suggested the Pork Bowl.

Formatted bowl

After hearing about the proposal, Ken Winebark, Lebanon County livestock agent and coordinator of the Bowl, in addition to Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist; Cheryl Fairbairn; and Bill Morray, ag agent in Adams County, formatted the state Pork Bowl after the Chester County contest. "Together, we wrote the basic questions," according to Fairbairn. The first year of the Bowl, six teams were present. (The committee decided to keep competing teams to a maximum of 12 because of the time limitations of the Congress.)

The Pork Bowl was modeled closely after the Chester County contest, with brackets and the process of single elimination.

Chester County continues the popular tradition of the bowl, in which they select those individuals to represent the county at the state contest.

Fairbairn said she tells the students "they better know a lot about the pork industry to win that contest." The 4-H team placed first in 1986 and has consistently placed second or third since 1986. But competition is becoming a lot more stiff, because the questions are difficult and the equipment (in which contestants try to identify) is sophisticated.

12 teams accepted

In the contest, each county is invited to enter a team of four 4-H'ers and or four FFA members. An entry fee of $25 is required per team.

As of Dec. 3 last year, 12 teams had been accepted to the competition, and three were on the waiting list. The six 4-H teams included Potter, Chester, Indiana, Armstrong, Lebanon, and York counties. The FFA teams included Greenwood, Big Spring, Chambersburg, Mifflinburg, Littlestown, and Newport.

Awards will be presented to the top teams, according to Winebark. The top team will receive free tickets to the Pork Congress banquet scheduled for 6:30 p.m. in the Main Ballroom.

Boar Sale

This is the first year that the Performance Tested Boar Sale, normally held later in the year at State College, will be conducted in conjunction with the Pork Congress at the Penn Harris at 3:30 p.m. on

According to Glenn Eberly, the Boars on test include four Poland China, 48 Yorkshires, eight Durocs, eight Landrace, eight Hampshires, and four Berkshires. Approximately 45 boars will be sold by videotape.

Most of the boars already have completed their test with average gains of 2.20 pounds per day.
