Dairy Pasture Walks Set

SOUTHAMPTON (Bucks Co.) — Twelve contestants will compete in Atlantic Dairy Cooperative's 1993 Outstanding Young Cooperator contest, which will be held June 17-18 at the Turf Valley Hotel and Country Club in Ellicott City, Md.

During the contest, the Young Cooperators will participate in personal interviews and table topic discussions. Five winners, including the Outstanding Young Cooperators, will be selected by a panel of three judges.

Judging is based on knowledge of cooperatives and the dairy industry, leadership, speaking ability and poise.

This year's contestants include Sheld and Tami Miller, of Bangor, representing District 1; Joe and Cindy Doak, Woodstown, N.J., District 2; Richard and Loretta Savidge, Mertztown, District 8; Daniel and Brenda Rice, Kempton, District 9; John and Penny Garber, Waynesboro, District 10; Jim and Debra Krantz, Quarryville, District 12; Ronald and Jane Reese, Port Matilda, District 13; Evan and Lori Burkholder, Fayetteville, District 15; Gary and Gail Thoman, Dallastown, District 16; Logan Bower, Blain, District 18; Gary and Claudia Bechtel, Currville, District 20; and Robert and Beverly Stanton, Clearville, District 21.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Holstein Association this week announced most of the details for its 1993 Junior Holstein Schools.

There are two judging schools, each two days in duration, offered to all junior members, regardless of cattle-breed affiliation.

Though location of the schools changes every year, a west site and an eastern site are selected to provide a reasonable opportunity for all youth to attend.

For this year, the specific locations for the schools are yet to be determined. Ken Raney, director of member relations for the Pa. Holstein Association, said the hotels and meeting places will be announced within the next several weeks.

However, the general location of the western school will be Crawford County, while the eastern school is to be held in Berks County.

The western school is to be held Monday and Tuesday, July 5 and July 6; the eastern school is set for Friday and Saturday, July 9 and July 10.

School officials are to be Steve Shaw, of Williamsburg, for the western school, and Gary Rogers, of Penn State University, for the east.

The fee schedule for the schools are identical, and are designed to reflect travel differences.

For those who need overnight accommodations the fee is $25. That includes school costs, the hotel room and an evening meal.

room and an evening meal.

For those who live close enough to commute, the cost of the school is $15, which covers the cost of the school and an evening meal.

This year, a second member of the family who attends the same school will receive $5 off of their registration cost.

Each school starts noon the first day and ends noon the second day. There are to be between eight to 12 classes of cattle to be judged and instructors will attempt to cover all the basics of judging cattle.

Included in the instruction will be type evaluation, terminology, class breakdowns and how to effectively give reasons. Each person in attendance will have an opportunity to work one-on-one with an experienced judge on reasons giving.

All junior members, regardless of cattle-breed affiliation, are invited to attend. Furthermore, the schools are also open to 4-H and FFA members.

The deadline for registration is June 26. For more information, call or write: the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, 839 Benner Pike, State College PA 16801, (814) 234-0364.

Gift Will Endow Faculty Chair

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A Penn State alumnus who says America must protect its world leadership in agricultural productivity has committed $750,000 to Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

C. Lee Rumberger of Pittsburgh, a former vice president with H.J. Heinz Co., made the donation to endow a faculty chair that will boost the college's research programs. The chair will be funded through a combination of lifetime gifts and an estate note. It will build on a professorship that Rumberger endowed with a $250,000 donation in 1987.

"Lee Rumberger has long recognized that our nation's leadership in agriculture has rested on a strong commitment to research," said Lamartine F. Hood, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences. "Research is the key to ensuring a high quality, safe and nutritious food supply."

Rumberger, who once served as vice president for research at Heinz, said, "I know from personal experience how important research is to the entire agricultural industry. We can't afford to be complacent. We must always be looking for better products and more efficient ways of doing things. My hope is that the Rumberger chair will play an important role in that area."

The C. Lee Rumberger and Family Chair in Agricultural Sciences will be appointed by the dean and could be located in any of the college's academic units.

"The Rumberger chair will help us to recruit and retain a world-class faculty member, who in turn will attract superior students," said Hood.

A Warriors Mark native, Rumberger was graduated from Penn State in 1920 with a bachelor's degree in animal husbandry and served as county agent in Fayette County for eight years. He joined Heinz in 1929 and worked his way through management ranks, becoming vice president for research and quality control in 1951.

Named vice president for development in 1961, he helped start Heinz operations in the Netherlands, Italy and Mexico, and was president and treasurer of the company's Mexican subsidiary. He retired in 1965.

Rumberger has long been active in alumni affairs in the College of Agricultural Sciences. In 1968, he became founding president of the college's alumni society and in 1974 the college named him an Alumni Fellow.

Rumberger has served on the governing boards of many agricultural organizations, including the agricultural board of the National Research Council and the Agricultural Research Institute, affiliated with the National Academy of Sciences.

Penn State honored him as a Distinguished Alumnus in 1960.
