

Lancaster Farm And Home Foundation Names Scholarship Winners

(Continued from Page A1)

is a member of Key Club and the National Honor Society. Although he is not from a dairy farm, he likes cows, is a member of the 4-H Dairy Cattle Club, and raises some on a nearby farm. He also works part time at Bard's Hardware in Leola.

Jason R. Barnett, the son of James and Susan Barnett of Strasburg is headed for Penn State after graduation from Lampeter-Strasburg. The 18-year-old said, "I want to study agriculture. Although I haven't narrowed it down, it will probably be dairy and animal science."

His choice of college was predestined, he said, because his dad, grandfather, uncle, and sister graduated from Penn State.

"It's the best in the country," Jason said of the university.

In FFA, Jason held offices as president, vice president, and treasurer. He earned a Keystone Degree and raised hogs as his project.

At school, Jason was a peer counselor and a member of National Honor Society, and soccer and wrestling teams.

He is a member of the Mt. Eden Lutheran Church youth group.

Jason works part time as a cook and dishwasher at Isaac's Deli in Strasburg.

Jeffrey Bollinger, son of Raymond and Sharon Bollinger of Ephrata, plans to study animal science at Penn State after graduation from Ephrata High School. Jeff raises Suffolk sheep, which have earned many top honors in fairs. This resulted in a sheep proficiency award from FFA, where Jeff is treasurer and a Keystone winner.

Jeff is a member of 4-H Woolies Club, Archery Club, and a member of the Ephrata Nazarene Youth Group. He works half days for Agway in the small engines department.

Amy Fenstermacher, daughter of Terrence and Kathy Fenstermacher, is headed to the Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science. The Hempfield senior said that she wanted to be an interior designer ever since she was four years old.

At that time, her mother worked for a furniture store and Amy liked playing with the swatches of fabrics. Her interest in interior design was further spurred when she studied interior design in home economics in high school.

Amy is also a class officer, photography editor for the school paper, cheerleading co-captain, a member of the Christian Education Committee of Salem UCC, and a member of Dance Theater.

Amy has also received an academic scholarship from the College and one from the Lancaster County Home Economics Association.

Lori M. Harnish believes Delaware Valley College is the best choice for her. The Manheim Central senior had her sights set on being a gym teacher until she got involved in FFA. Now, she wants to teach ag.

"I want to definitely teach in Lancaster County," she said. "I was born and bred here and I never want to leave."

In FFA, where she was vice president, Lori received the Keystone Degree. Her team placed first in horse judging and she was 12th in individual judging. In the county, she was first in livestock judging.

She is president of the 4-H Boots and Saddles Club; secretary of the 4-H Beef Club, where she received the Red Rose Max Smith Award, and is secretary of the 4-H Horsin' Around Club.

At school, she participated in field hockey, track, and rifle club. Community service included projects with the Lancaster Boys and Girls Club and with Christ Home.

Lori raises sheep on the family farmette and works part time at Brownstone Horse Farm.

Lori is the daughter of J. Rodney and of Nancy Harnish of Lititz.

Lorraine K. Martin of Ephrata is the daughter of Leroy and Laura Martin. The Conestoga Valley senior chose Messiah College as the place to study dietetics.

She said her interest in dietetics was influenced by teachers and her desire to work with people in a hospital setting.

At school, Lorraine is treasurer of her school's National Honor Society, a member of Girl's Varsity Volleyball, and a member of the Fellowship of Christians Club.

At Mentzler's Mennonite Church, Lorraine is president of the youth group and teaches Sunday school. She is a volunteer at Ephrata Friendship Community, where she helps with the mentally handicapped game night. She works part time for Hurst's Produce and Weaver's Candy Outlet.

Lorraine also received an academic scholarship from Messiah College and one from the Lancaster County Home Economics Association.

Timothy Zuck, son of Charles and Gloria Zuck of Elizabethtown, will study culinary arts at Johnson and Wales. At Elizabethtown High School, Tim played varsity football and soccer. He was on the wrestling team, parliamentarian of the Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA), president of Varsity Club, and member of the National Honor Society. Tim is also active in the Lebanon Bible Fellowship youth group.

Farm and Home Foundation scholarships for pursuing a career in agriculture or home economics went to, from left, front: Amy Fenstermacher, Lori Harnish, and Lorraine Martin. Back, from left: George Bard, Jason Barnett, Jeffrey Bollinger, and Timothy Zuck.

Tim said his interest in culinary arts sprouted when his mother started working outside the home and he needed to make supper. He likes trying different "stuff" and eating it too. Tim thinks it would be great to be executive chef in a restaurant like Hotel Hershey.

Tim also received an academic scholarship from Johnson and Wales and one from FBLA.

Alternate winners are Frank Rohrer Jr., Quarryville, and Jason Reifsnyder, Terre Hill.

Milking Shorthorn Convention Set For Ohio

DELAWARE, Ohio — For the first time ever, Ohio Milking Shorthorn breeders will host the American Milking Shorthorn Society (AMSS) annual convention, set for June 17 through June 19, in Delaware.

Dairy producers and industry representatives from across the country are expected to attend the three-day convention scheduled to be held in the Delaware Hotel.

A tour featuring an outstanding breeder's herd and an artificial insemination facility will kick off the convention activities on June 17.

The tour is to leave the hotel 8:30 a.m. June 17 to tour the Select Sires Inc. and Select Embryo facility in Plain City. Tour participants are to visit the cooperative's headquarters, see in-clinic facilities, its elite resident donor dams, and hear about the entire scope of the largest AI cooperative in the nation.

After the tour of the AI facility, an Amish-style lunch is to be served at a restaurant.

Following lunch, the tour is to visit the farm of Mike and Polly Ullom, located near Croton, in Licking County.

The Ulloms were the winners of the 1991 AMSS Harry Clappitt Young Breeder Award. They farm 500 acres, raising corn, wheat, soybeans and alfalfa. The couple milks 45 cows, half registered Milking Shorthorns, the rest a mixture of registered Ayrshires, Jerseys and grade Guernseys.

The convention continues Thursday evening with an informal hog roast at the Delaware County Fairgrounds.

Starting 7 a.m. Friday is a breakfast buffet, followed at 8:30 a.m.

with an awards program.

The American Milking Shorthorn Society will present the 8th Annual Harry Clappitt Young Breeder Award to a breeder aged 21 to 40, based on participation in the breed and related dairy industry activities.

In addition, the society also will salute Jesse Arthur, a pioneer Illawarra cattle breeder, by presenting a memorial trophy on his behalf to a society members with the three highest producing Illawarra-influenced cows on test for milk and butterfat.

The Illawarra cattle is an Australian Shorthorn-linked breed first registered in the Milking Shorthorn herd book in 1899.

Also, awards are to be presented for outstanding individual cow production for milk, fat and protein.

The AMSS annual meeting starts at 10 a.m. Friday. Lewis Arthur, AMSS president, and Betsy Bierdek, operations officer, are to address the membership on the society's programs and policies.

An election is also to be held to determine who is to occupy four seats on the society's board of directors.

Board members whose terms are expiring are Bill Bartlett, of Salisbury, Mass., Bill Jones, of Washington, Iowa, Clark Von Tungeln, of Verden, Okla., and Art Woodward, of Rio, Wis. All four are eligible for re-election.

The meeting is to continue through Friday afternoon.

Scheduled for Friday night is a banquet featuring speaker Ed Johnson, found of Agri Communicators and president and farm director of ABN Radio and Television.

Johnson has received a number of state and national honors from various agriculturally related organizations. He has also been included in the Ohio 4-H Hall of Fame and the Ohio State Fair Hall of Fame.

A graduate of Ohio State University, studying agricultural economics and education, he currently serves on the university's alumni board of directors and is president of the Ohio 4-H Foundation Board.

At the banquet, the recipients of the John O. Rowe Citizen Award, the national achievement winner and the national shorthorn queen are to be announced.

After the banquet, a dance is scheduled.

On the final day of the convention, a junior heifer show for junior members is scheduled for the Delaware County Fairgrounds. The champion winner is to receive a $200 prize and $100 goes to the reserve champion.

A convention sale is also scheduled, starting at noon at the fairgrounds.

Junior members also have a full slate during the convention with a national youth contest, production award presentations program, the queen contest, a pool party and dairy show.

For more information on hotel accommodations, call the Delaware Hotel at 1-800-837-1262, or (614) 363-1262.

Room reservations can be made directly. Members should mention the convention when making reservations.

For more information, including details of the sale catalog and meal reservations, write to the Ohio Milking Shorthorn Society, in care of Karen S. Body, secretary-treasurer, 7276 Hightop Rd., Hillsboro, Ohio 45133, or call during the evening (513) 987-9745.

For those using air transportation, a free shuttle to the hotel is available from Columbus International Airport. Free transportation to and from the fairgrounds is to be provided by the hotel.

House Salutes Big Mac Inventor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania House of Representatives recently recognized the inventor of the McDonald's Big Mac on the 25th anniversary of the super hamburger sandwich.

In a resolution adopted recently, the House congratulated Jim Delligatti, of Fox Chapel, Pennsylvania, for inventing the sandwich during the summer of 1967. The official 25th anniversary of the Big Mac was May 4, with more than 14 billion having been sold.

In the resolution, it states, "... therefore, be it resolved that the House of Representatives congratulate Jim Delligatti for inventing the Big Mac, an American sandwich classic; and be it further resolved that the House ... rejoice in the outstanding culinary and marketing accomplishment of a citizen of this commonwealth ..."

Many ex-dairy cows have been used to make those billions of hamburger sandwiches.